Our Ducks at Howe Ranch

Ducks play an important role on the farm! While they aren't part of the petting zoo (they prefer to be admired from a distance), they contribute in many special ways.

• Some of our ducks are rescues

Many of the ducks here found their forever home at Howe Ranch after being abandoned or injured. They now live safely in our ponds and shaded enclosures where they can splash, play, and preen freely.

• We care for Pekin and Swedish ducks

Our white Pekins are the friendly classic farm ducks you may recognize from storybooks, while our Swedish ducks—grayish-blue with white bibs—are known for their calm personalities and beauty.

• Ducks help the farm ecosystem

They eat pests, fertilize the soil naturally, and love to forage for bugs and greens—keeping the environment balanced and healthy.

• Please don't try to touch them

Unlike our goats and mini cows, ducks prefer space and can become stressed if handled. The best way to enjoy them is by quietly observing their playful antics!

Ducks lay nutrient-rich eggs

Duck eggs are prized by bakers, chefs, and the health conscious community for their rich flavor and higher protein content. They contain more vitamins and minerals than chicken eggs and are especially valued for their creamy texture.
